JUDGE PUGH TO END LIQUOR CASES TODAY New One-Party Man Will

Patrick Cook, Georgetown saloon-keeper, and his bartender, Richard Cheney, will know today what the jury sitting before Judge Pugh, in Police Court, thinks of their defense against the testimony of government witnesses and efforts of Assistant United States Attorney James B. Archer, to prove them guilty of seli-ling liquor to soldiers in uniform. Attorney James O'Shea, who appears for Cook and Chaney, has in-sisted all through the trial, which now is in its third day, that the government must confine itself to the information in the warrant. The warrant alleges that the two men sold and delivered liquor to two soldiers, namely, Caswell and Flynn. Efforts, are being made by the defense to prove that Caswell was confined to his tent the night of July 27, the time specified in the information.

This ought to be a golden opportunity for bartenders and other purveyors of spirits, who will be pushed off the boards by law on November 1. By using a little "tact and judgment" they get paid a comfortable salary for doing what many of that fraternity will be forced to do by necessity.

Kitchen economists and prudent housewives take notice that men only need apply. Perhaps this is only a move on the part of your crafty Uncle to avoid a stampede of the fair sex from other departments of government service, many of them having the experience acquired by long practice in living on their meager pay. For the examination, with salaries up to $4,000 per year, "experience" counts 50 points, while for the second grade economist, it is worth only 25 points.

Although not stated in the announce ment, the applicant no doubt enters into a sort of gentlemen's agreement to save the government annually at least the amount in dollars and cents of the salary he draws. Appointees' duties in the first grade
